County History: Maricopa County was originally part of both Pima and Yavapai Counties before its establishment in 1871. When the County was first formed, it saw rapid growth due to the mining, agriculture and livestock industries, as well as a number of military installations. The County's seat, Phoenix, is also the capital of Arizona. Maricopa County, as well as a number of cities within the County, have been listed as some of the fastest growing areas in the country. Maricopa County is home to more Arizonans than any other county in the state.
